an interesting discussion took place yesterday aftermon before the Assembly Ralirosal Committee upon the bill reducing the freight on milk on the New-York and lariem Ralirosal. Dr. Humphrey, Representative of Putbasu County, and W. D. Murphy, a lawyer of Albany, appeared in favor of the bill, arguing that the present late of freight upon this article was an imposition, and has the poor of New-York were the real sufferers; but the railroad company charged more for hat kind of freight than it did for that in cattle and horses. The gentlemen further argued that if the fare on freight was reduced the fare of mulk would likewise he lessened. Chauncy M. Depew for any of the rounties along the line of railroad were in avor of the reduction of this freight; they had not to hay it, and the cry came only from a number of dealers, whose past course gave not indication that they would

REPUBLICAN RATIFICATION MEETING AT COOPER INSTITUTE. SPEECHES OF THE HON. E. D. CULVER AND THE

HON. F. J. FITHIAN. The large hall of Cooper Iustitute was well filled last evening, on the occasion of the meeting held to ratify the action of the late Republican State Convention at Syracuse. The background of the stage was decorated with festoons of national flags and portraits of the candidates recommended by that Convention. At 72 o'clock, the meeting was called to order by Joshua G. Abbe, esq., who nominated as chairman for the occasion esq., who nominated as chairman for the occasion the Hon. Edgar Ketchum, who was received with cheers. A long list of Vice-Presidents and Secretaries was-read, including the names of the Hon. E. D. Morgan, Horace Greeley, F. B. Cutting, Wm. E. Dodge, Geo. Opdyke, William Cullen Bryant, Marshall O. Roberts, Charles S. Spencer, Gen. Hiram Walbridge, John Austin Stevens, jr., the Hon. F. A. Conkling, Charles A. Dana, Parke Godwin, Wm. B. Astor, Alex. T. Stewart, and many others. Mr. Kotchum, on taking the chair, remarked that they had gathered to indorse the action of the Convention which lately assembled at Syracuse. It was one of the most admirable features of our form of government that it afforded an opportunity every few years to reward the faithful leader by a reflection to office and to get rid of the unfaithful one. The Convention which recently assembled at Syracuse had nominated for the two highest offices in the gift of the people two tried and honored public servants, a soldler and a civilian. The man of the people, the trusted leader, the noble martyr, Abraham Lincoln, had fallen—struck down by the hatred of the country's ensemies in the moment of victory. But the spirit of Abraham Lincoln is not dead. It lives in you, and you have resolved that the principles for which he labored and died shall be sustained. The State Convention has nominated two men who have, each in a different field, ahown their capacity and resolution to maintain those principles, and the country will sustain them.

Charles P. Shaw offered the following resolutions, which were adopted with applause:

Resolved, That this meeting cordially approves the platform and principles part forth by the Regulation State Convention rice-stry beld at Streams; and of his Errellener, Renben E. Fenten of New York for Vice-President. That we heartily command the action of our State Convention to to no the state of the United Nates, and of his Errellener, Renben E. her humblest citizen has the opportunity to achieve the most honorable position. You have one man la your minds, a man reared in the woods, who was a good judge of timber, knew how to split it into rails, and lay them up in a substantial fence; who could navigate a flat hottomed boat, and study blackstone by the light of the fire, until he had made himself a respectable lawyer, and finally won a never-dying name in the world's history. But all men of humble origin do not become great. You have one now in your minds who has swung around from a tailor's bench, and an aldermanish to a position of power and influence, and who has disgrated both the tailor's bench and the alderman's seat. We have now for a candidate for the Presidency a man whose father was a tanner, and who has learned the tanner's both the tailor's bench and the aiderman's seat. We have now for a candidate for the Presidency a man whose father was a tanner, and who has learned the tanner's trade as well as that of the General, and it is a good thing that he has, for we shall have some tanning for him to do next year. And we have a man with him who sprang from a family of lumbermen, and knows how to pick out good stuff to build a house with, and who is qualified to undertake the business of reconstruction. The speaker sketched the political history of Gov. Fenton, from the time when as President of the first Republican State Convention he joined with the late Hon. Hamilton Fish in effecting a union of the Wing and Republican parties, down to his course during the war of the Rebellion, and his recent acts as Governor of the State of New-York. It is a pleasure, said the speaker, to put before the people for their suffrages men who are bullet proof, whose record is clear and consistent from beginning to end. We have had experiences enough to teach us that it is time to take care of the second man on the horse. We have had Tyler and Filimore, and Johnson. Let us not risk the possibility of a counterpart to either of these in case our next Fresident should be taken away. The best guarantee for Gen. Grant's safety in the Presidential office is to have Reuben E. Fenton behind him. Do you think, said the speaker, that Abraham Lincoln would ever have received that bullet in his brain if the noble Hannihal Hannihn had been belond him if the roble Hannihal Hannihn had been belond him. To good the season as a season that the steps taken by Congress to effect the restoration of the Sourkern States to the Union on a loyal bass had all been rendered absolutely necessary by the conduct of Mr. Johnson and the people of the Rebel States, and that they were in all respects far hore merciful than the Beble were by any law entitled to receive

He effective, or which they had any right to expect. He effected his hearers to stand by the acts of Congress, and make their watchword for the campaign, "Equal rights and equal justice for all, and ne privileged classes."

The Hon. Freeman J. Fithian was then introduced and said: In the Presidential canvass of 1864, it was remarked by our leading statesmen that if the result of that clocation should prove disastrons to the Republican party, we should lose all we had gained. A TALK WITH THE PRESIDENT. MR. JOHNSON'S COLLISION WITH GEN. GRANT-HIS OPINIONS ON THE GENRAL'S HONESTY, POLITICS, ETC. "Mack," the correspondent of The Cincinnati Commercial, in the latest of his "Presidential Talks," represents the President as speaking as follows:

Mr. Johnson referred to that part of Gen. Grant's con espondence in which the General asks him to reduce to writing the order given to him verbally, to disregard any order received from Stanton, unless he knew it to eman-ate from the Executive. "Here," said he, "Gen. Grant asserts that I had given him such a verbal order. I never did anything of the kind. It was he himself who first suggested that I could take such a course as to reduce Stanton to a mere clerk, and it was this suggestion from neserte that I had given him such a verbul order. I never did anything of the kind. It was he himself who first suggested that I could take such a course as to reduce Stanton to a mere clerk, and it was this suggestion from him, and not any verbal order from me, that first brought the subject up in that light."

At this point the President produced a letter from Gen. Sherman, dated Saturday evening, January 18. Sherman says that it was the intention of himself and Grant to call on Stanton, on the following Monday, to request him, for the good of the country, to resign the office of Secretary of War; but that he learns Grant must go to Ruchmond, and he to Annapolis, so that they can't call on Stanton on Mondby, but will do so at some other time, and insist that he shall resign. Then Sherman goes on to say that if Stanton won't resign it will be time enough to look to "ulterior considerations."

"Now," said the President, "these 'ulterior considerations' were nothing else than the suggestions of Grant himself that Stanton should be treated as a mere clerk, and confined strictly to the execution of the duties unposed upon him by the letter of the law. And yet, after having suggested this and urged it upon me, he writes me a letter asking me to reduce my 'verbal order' to writing. It was his own 'verbal order, not mine. Yet he makes it appear from his letter that the first intimation came from me, and that he never said a word about it until I had spoken of it. That's a fair specimen of the way he has been acting all along. This whole matter is not the first or the only time he has played that part. It's only one of a great many instances in which he has grossly deceived me. I got a dispatch one day from Georgia, telling me that Meade and Jenkins had been in consultation, and that it was probable that Merede would remove Jenkins. I sent for Gen. Grant, and he came over. I showed him the dispatch and told him I would remove Jenkins to be removed 'until I could hear something more about the matter. He assured me that to give him (Grant) so many additional votes, for they would vote just as he told them. He was quite vehement at the time in his denunciations of the Radical policy of negro suffrage.

The above, I think, settles the question of veracity as to Grant being a white man's government man. It is pretty well authenticated now.

The above naturally suggested an inquiry as to whether the President did not understand Grant to be on his side all along until quite receastly, and whether there was any tangible reason for the General's change of front. "Of course I understood him to be with me all along, because I had his word for it," said the President. "He went down South, and came back more for me than I was for myself. He wrote a report that encouraged me more than anything else had done to persevere in the effort to get the Southern States buck into the Union as I had started out. He called on he frequently for a long time after the controversy between me and Congress had commenced, and, if he meant anything by what he said, he was my friend and supporter. He never talked politics very much, because Grant always pretended he didn't know anything about it; but he didn't seem to regard Reconstruction as a political question. He seddenly turned up as a Radical candidate for the Presidency; and that was the first I knew of his opposition to me."

The proceedings of the court were opened yesterday morning at 10 o'clock. The first witness examined for the defense was the Rev. Dr. Tiffany, paster of St. James's M. E. Church, New-Brunswick, who testified that the services as conducted by Mr. Tyng on the 11th of July in witness' church, were about such as are usually splemnized in the Protestant Episcopal Church, differing only in the fact that the congregation had no prayer ooks, and the pealter was therefore omitted. The Absolution was not "mixed up" with the Lord's Prayer, as has been stated, but was read in the right place. Mr. Tyng wore no surplice but a dress coat. Dr. Muhienberg was the next witness. He testified that he had been so years in the ministry, and had frequently known Episcopal ministers to officiate in non-Episcopal churches dinary occasions he knew it to be customary with nature ters to use as such of the preserribed orthous proposed to the proper book as they deem expedient; and the proper book as they deem expedient; and the proper of the defense. In answer to the question whether the usage of Episcopal ministers is and has been to efficiate in churches of other denominations, he said that in Pennsylvania they were in the habit of preaching wherever, in the Providence of God, there was an opening, no man contradicting, and that he had often thin officiated. He thought that for all attack was an opening, no man contradicting, and that he had often thin officiated. He thought that for all attack of the proper of
